BULLETIN BOARD

Bringing Citizen Journalism to Students

Event Date and Venue: 15th March (EMK Center, Midas Center, Dhaka) and 27 March (American Center, Baridhara, Dhaka)

Tech Solutions to Socio-Economic Problems (TSSEP) applies digital journalism to solve the socio-economic problems of Bangladesh. It is a workshop organised by the YES Alumni Bangladesh, sponsored by the Bureau of Education and Cultural Affairs (ECA) of the US Department of State, and monitored by the US Embassy Dhaka.

The TSSEP is a joint effort in association with iEARN-BD, Mozilla Webmaker, S.P.E.E.D Youth, Microsoft Bangladesh, Radio Koler Gan, ABC Radio, Diamondback Productions and Souktel. SHOUT is the media partner. The workshop will be a day-long programme during which time students from ten schools will be taught how to bring attention to socio-economic problems using citizen journalism and social media.

Within four days of conclusion of the workshop, the participants (in teams) will make video presentations on a specified problem, utilising their knowledge, and release them on social networking sites. The team with the best presentation will be selected by the number of likes, shares and a panel of judges. They will be given a trophy on the certification day which will be at the American Center, Dhaka on March 27, 2014.

The project is organised by Gulshan Jubaed Prince, the Co Founder of Smallfoot, and logistics are managed by Aranya Biswas, US Exchange Alumni.

The grand finale of BSB-Cambrian Electoral Debate Competition took place on March 7 at Bashundhara City. Champion debaters from IBAIS University received trophy from economist Dr. Rehman Sobhan; BSB Foundation Chairman, Lion M.K. Bashar; and Debate for Democracy Chairman, Hasan Ahmed Chowdhury Kiran.
